The conference Saturday approved a plan to help underpaid preachers of the conference, tentatively assuring all a salary minimum of $800.

R. H. Cannon, Little Rock, secretary of a commission appointed last year to make a study of underpaid preachers, said 25 preachers last year received less than $800 each.

He said the survey showed it would have taken a little over $4,000 to make up the deficit to pay up to $800 for each of the 25.

The plan adopted Saturday calls for the charge served by life preachers to be added to increase his salary half of the amount up to $800, the conference to pay the other half.

A commission, composed of a member from each of seven districts, either minister or layman, will administer the plan.

Limitation for the benefits are to members of conference, young men serving on trial or by appointment of a bishop, and local pastors who have served eight consecutive years as supply pastors in conference.

Preachers will make up the fund by paying one per cent of salaries annually. It is to be voluntary and not an assessment.

Bishop Moore commented on plan: "If you think you're doing something this morning, you're just getting started. However, you're on the right track, but with lots to do. Everyone of my conferences has done something on this problem. But taking money out of one preacher's pocket and putting it into another's is not going to solve the problem. If we're to progress the churches must take care of their preachers."

Bishop Moore ordained seven as elders Saturday. They are: C. H. Giesse, Bearden; C. H. Gilliam, Gilliam; Edward W. Harris, Stamps; V. D. Keeley, St. Charles; James Simpson, Lockesburg; J. Frank Walker, Emmet; D. L. Wilcox, Mabelvale.

Halph Clayton, Junction City, and Howard Alexander Brooks, Malvern, were ordained as deacons.

der for a lot of stuff that I can't handle alone, so I thought maybe you'd like a piece of it."

"That depends," said George. "Maybe it's out of my line."

"Oh, it is, I guess, but that doesn't matter. I buy and sell produce. I've just bought and shipped about all I can handle until I get returns."

"I don't know a thing about that kind of business."

"You don't have to," said Danbury. "Here's an order for potatoes that must be shipped tomorrow or I lose it. I don't like to do that for there's a profit of better than $400 in it."

"How much will it take to swing it?" asked George.

"Oh," said Danbury, "about $700. But I've paid out so much this week that I've got only about half that much on hand. If you care to put up half, I'll cut you in on half the profit."

"How long would that tie up the money?" asked George.

"Less than a week," Danbury replied. "And you'll make a profit of about 60 per cent."

"That's worth thinking about," said George.

"Here's how it works," said Danbury. "We send a sight draft with the Bill-of-Lading and the draft will be paid before the shipment is released. Now, it's up to you. You can make a couple of hundred dollars easy enough, if you want to—otherwise I'll just pass it up."

It seemed to George an opportunity to make some rather easy money. There was the signed order from a big produce commission house and everything appeared to be in order.

"Are you sure you can get the potatoes?" asked George.

"Why certainly," said Danbury. "I can get them today and have them in the freight house tonight."

"When do we need the cash?"

"I have mine right here," said Danbury, "and if you'll get yours, we'll put it all in your safe until the stuff is delivered."

"Then you don't have to pay for them until they are delivered?" asked George.

"Oh, no," Danbury replied, "I already have them under option. We pay off tonight after delivery to the railroad station."

Danbury took an envelope out of his pocket, and from it, counted out $350. "Here's mine," he said.

"All right," said George, "just wait till I go over to the bank. It won't take long."

A few minutes later he returned from the bank with $350, which he handed to Danbury. Together they counted the $700 and Danbury placed it in the envelope. He then went to the water cooler, moistened the envelope flap and sealed it, before handing it over to George.

"Now," said Danbury, "you'd better make a notation on the envelope and"

Bobcats Run Over 5 Touchdowns for "Big 15" Victory

Hope Stages Wild Offensive Game to Defeat Russellville

COME FROM BEHIND

Russellville Tallies First With a Beautiful Field Goal

By LEONARD ELLIS

The Hope High School football team won its seventh game of the season here Friday night by defeating Russellville in a homecoming conference battle, 33 to 9.

Trailing three to nothing at the start of the second quarter, the Bobcats showed a burst of offensive power to run over three touchdowns and kick two extra points to lead at the half, 20 to 3.

During the first half the Bobcats used the old "chicken fight" formation that made many a Pine Bluff High School grid team famous during Foy Hammann's career as mentor there.

Hope scored its fourth touchdown in the third quarter and added its final in the fourth period.

The Russellville team jumped into the lead a few minutes after the opening kickoff. A Russellville player recovered a fumble on the Hope 20-yard line. J. Keeton and Salmon drove to the 10. Freeman Stone and Hugh Reese went through to toss Salmon for a five-yard loss.

On the next play a pass placed the ball on the one-yard line. The hard-charging Bobcat line smothered ball carriers for losses on two consecutive plays. On third down, Salmon dropped back and booted a beautiful field goal to put Russellville out in front, 3 to 0.

Bailey Asserts He May Be Out of Politics

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — (AP) — Governor Bailey of Arkansas pledged himself Saturday to tenancy reform in an interview in which he expressed doubt he would ever offer for the United States Senate again, and uncertainly whether he would seek re-election as governor. "I haven't been in politics long enough to get the habit," Bailey said. "I don't even know whether I will run for governor again or not. I don't think I will run for the senate again." The governor is here to attend the Arkansas-Mississippi football game.

Roosevelt Faces His Toughest Congress on Monday, Nov. 15th

1938 Elections and Battle for Power Increase Tension

Special Session Same Congress That Stopped Him Before

STORMY WEATHER

Many Issues Confront the Re-convening U. S. Congressmen

By RODNEY DUTCHER

NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—The toughest congress with which President Roosevelt has yet had to deal now re-assembles. This is the same Congress which balked the Roosevelt program last spring and summer. It was summoned into a special session opening November 15 to enact the same program—minus that court plan.

Predictions as to what this Congress will do and as to the extent to which it will co-operate with Roosevelt probably are as dangerous as those made last year after the huge Democratic election victory, when most of us thought F. D. R. could get approximately what he wanted from Capitol Hill.

Plenty of stormy weather may be safely forecast, but more legislative results than were had from the last Congress seem fairly certain.

The issue of centralization of power, both as to expanded federal control and increased presidential powers, will be almost constantly in the foreground.

In the background will be general concern with the primaries and elections of 1938, the plottings of conservatives and liberals thinking in terms of 1940 and efforts of southern and other Democrats to see that Roosevelt doesn't control the next Democratic national convention.

Either the domestic business situation or the international situation may lead to developments not now anticipated.

The Same Old List

The problems before Congress are all familiar. The proposed wage-hour legislation has as its aim the same chief objective announced more than four years ago for NIRA.

Stupis every control tried first in 1933, is second on the list.

The regional development proposal calls for an extension of the TVA idea through the nation.

Government reorganization, Roosevelt's fourth special session item, has been talked of and vainly stalled at for 25 years.

Anti-monopoly legislation, if any, will be a new attempt to meet an ancient issue.

They're all old, but they're also all hotly controversial.

Few will be surprised if no important legislation is passed before Christmas. The special session and the regular session beginning in January almost immediately afterward may be considered as a whole.

Diverse and Two-edged

The factors to be weighed in speculating as to the extent Roosevelt will get what he asks are diverse and often two-edged.

Absence of the court plan, which gummed everything up in the first session, is one. The condition which fought Roosevelt on the court will not get together again—at least not without conspicuous absences.

On the other hand, that fight left scars. The President called the special session with an obvious burst of self-confidence, based on his reception during his western tour and conviction that the people were still strong for him. Yet the point is made that enthusiasm for Roosevelt doesn't mean effective popular support on specific issues and there seems no enthusiastic mass fervor over any item on his current program.

Congress meets at what may be either side of the half-way point in a business slump and theoretically this should permit the President more scope in solving economic problems. But there will also be plenty of at-

Congressmen Are to Convene Noon

Many Members Doubt If Program Can Be Completed

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Congress will meet Monday to tackle unfinished farm and labor legislation in a special session already overcast by concern about the business outlook.

Although pledge to make crop control its first business there were indications from some members that possible steps to improve the economic situation are uppermost in their minds.

President Roosevelt will send a message to the congress as soon as it meets Monday noon, presumably setting forth his views on crop control, wage-hour bill, government reorganization and regional planning.

Many members returning after a recess of less than three months, expressed doubt that even half his program could be completed during the session.

Cure of Corns Won't Last Unless Shoes of Proper Fit Are Obtained

This is the 26th of a series of articles in which Dr. Morris Fishbein discusses diseases of the skin.

(No. 367)

When the skin on any portion of the body is repeatedly rubbed, it responds by thickening. The thickened area is called a callus. On the toes it is a corn.

Usually corns and calluses appear on the feet more often than on any other portion of the body. They are found, however, on the hands of mechanics, golfers, and others who subject the hands to repeated rubbing. Calluses will also be found on the knees of scrub-women and frequently on the shoulders of porters.

In most instances calluses or corns on the feet are associated with badly fitting shoes. They are found at the points at which the shoes are most likely to rub the foot—namely, on the ends of the toes, on the upper sides of the joints (particularly in people whose shoes are too short), and between the toes when the shoes are too narrow. A corn or callus will become painful just as soon as it involves a nerve ending.

There are so many remedies for corns and calluses that almost everyone tries his own corn cure. The ordinary commercial corn cure is a mixture of salicylic acid with some other substances which will hold the salicylic acid in solution or suspension so that it can act over a long period of time on the thickened skin. The salicylic acid will soften the skin so that it will come away.

Many people year after year cut away the tops of corns or calluses, but they immediately recur because the causative mechanism has not been controlled. A specialist in disturbances of the feet will usually change the shoes or apply pads, braces or wedges so that the pressure will be taken off the spot at which the corn or the callus appears. Removal of this pressure will usually result in a disappearance of the corn at that point.

Soft corns between the toes, most frequently between the fourth and fifth toes, are often associated with an infection by the ringworm fungus. The use of short and narrow pointed shoes pushes the little toe backward and produces friction between the joints of the first bone of the fourth toe and the head of the first bone of the fifth toe. It is possible to remove soft corns between these two toes by applying various treatments which, however, may be painful because the tissues here are so tender. Sometimes a single treatment with radium or the X-ray will bring about permanent relief.

Bobcats Run Over

Hope received, brought the ball up to their own 45 where Ramsey punted. On the play the Russellville safety man fumbled and Bright recovered for Hope on the Russellville 45. Masters shot a pass to Reese who was brought down on the 12-yard line where Russellville held and took possession.

After Russellville failed to gain, Edmon punted to his own 35 where the Bobcats started a march for touchdown. Masters went off tackle for three and then little Davey Coleman, a new star in the Bobcat backfield, picked up seven for a first down. Eason and Masters plunged to the 15 as the quarter ended. Masters passed to Ramsey for a first down that left the ball on the five-yard line where Bright swept around end for Hope's first touchdown. W. Parsons attempted to kick goal was wide.

The Crimson Cyclone team received and returned to the 25. Reese charged through to throw Masters for a yard loss. Edmon then punted to Bright who took the ball in midfield and ran to the 30. Eason rifled a 10-yard pass to Reese. On the next play, Eason passed to Ramsey who was downed on the 16. Eason made five through the line and then Masters cracked center for touchdown. Parsons kicked goal.

Stone in Hero Role
Russellville received and returned to the 30. Two passes failed and Edmon dropped back to punt. Big Freeman Stone, 265-pound all-star tackle, charged through like a mountain to the line, blocked the punt, recovered it, and ran for touchdown. The fans gave him an ovation. Parsons converted and the Bobcats were out in the lead, 20 to 3.

Russellville took the next kickoff and returned to the 30. A pass from Edmon to Keeton was executed and the Russellville star got loose in an open field, but was brought down by Coleman on the Hope 35. Ramsey recovered a fumble for Hope to start off a threatened score. Ramsey punted to Edmon who brought it back to the 25. Edmon and Keeton plunged to the two-yard line where a Russellville player fumbled the ball. It rolled across the goal line where a Hope player fell on it for a touchback.

The ball was brought out on Hope's 20. Masters and Eason made a first down. Bright went off tackle for 10 and then Eason threw a pass to Reese for 15 yards as the half ended.

Stone in Backfield
As the second half started, Stone went to the backfield and W. Parsons went to the line. The Bobcats received, returned to the 30, and then marched 70 yards on a sustained drive for touchdown. Stone tore off yard after yard through the line. With the ball resting on the two-yard line after Stone and Masters had marched up the field, Stone went off tackle and across the goal line. Parsons' kick was wide.

After the next kickoff an exchange of punts left the ball on Russellville's 30. Keeton got away on a long run to place the ball on Hope's 40. Salmon two plays later got loose on an end run and touchdown.

Hope's Final Score
Early in the fourth quarter Fullback Eason intercepted a pass and ran to the Russellville 12-yard line. Leonard Bearden swept off end for 10 yards. Two line plays failed and then a reverse. Bearden to Bright was good for touchdown. A line play for extra point failed.

Both teams took the ball up and down the field but neither was able to score. Both teams showed wild offense power, the Bobcats marked up 22 first downs and the Russellville team 12. Hope showed its best aerial game of the season. With Eason and Masters doing most of the tossing, the Bobcat ends, Reese and Ramsey hung on to seven of 14 passes.

Reese in Old Form
With the exception of being blocked on two plays, Hugh Reese played a bang-up game, both on the offense and defense. An injury forced him to retire in the second half. Probably the best show of the night was put on by Hope's best tackle, Freeman Stone. On the defense he went through the line time after time. On the offense, he lugged that pigskin for many a yard. Like Reese, an injury forced him from the game in the last half.

Masters continued to show up brilliantly when given a chance to carry the ball. Masters probably turned in the best defensive work of the night. He went down on punts to bring down the Russellville safety man and ran from his own side to the other side of the field to tackle ball carriers on sweeping end runs.

Eason played a good game in the fullback role and fired several passes that found their mark. The prize find was little Davey Coleman, 145-pound halfback, who first broke into the lineup at Blytheville last week. You'll be hearing more about little Davey. He has three more years ahead of him.

The return of Bright to the lineup gave the Bobcats power and confidence. Bright has been on the injured list two weeks. Although slightly handicapped he played brilliantly. The entire Bobcat team played well. The old-time fight and spirit was there.

For Russellville, J. Keeton at fullback, and Salmon at quarter, were the big guns. Both showed plenty of power on their drives. The Russellville team resorted to the air quite frequently, tossing a total of 18 passes, completed four and had three intercepted. The Bobcats tossed 14, seven complete and had one intercepted.

The Bobcats lost 45 yards on three penalties. Russellville lost 25 yards on Goodland, Okla., Indian Academy and the Hope field next Friday night, and then take on St. Joseph High School of Dallas Thanksgiving Day at Hope.

The St. Joseph team has an impressive record this season. This Sunday, St. Joseph battles St. Thomas High School at Houston, Texas. Both are leaders of their district.

Business Lobbies Busy
Some of the most effective Democratic opponents of the court plan of action will be with the President in the next few months, and others will display a passion for regularity.

Senator Wheeler of Montana, has said he expects to support Roosevelt on labor, farm and other "progressive" issues.

O'Mahoney of Wyoming will demonstrate his friendship.

Continually of Texas, and other anti-court men, will be reasonably regular. But such conservative Democrats as Copeland of New York, Byrd and Glass of Virginia, Bailey of North Carolina, Tydings of Maryland, Burke of Nebraska, Smith of South Carolina, George of Georgia and Van Nuys of Indiana, as well as a number of southern committee chairmen, will often be found with the opposition.

And on top of that you probably will find business interests lobbying more intensively than ever for certain modifications of previous New Deal legislation, as well as against the current administration agenda.

"About what time will you be here?" asked George. "I may have to be out some, and I don't want to keep you waiting, and hold up the deal."

But Danbury did not return that night. In fact, George never saw him again. And a day or two later, when he opened the envelope in the presence of witnesses, it contained only pieces of newspaper, cut to the size of bills!

EVEN in that moment of abandonment to grief, Jack had agreed with Howell that the authorities must be summoned.

It was now past 8. The family physician was in the study and with him a group of men from police headquarters. A sense of tragedy and loss hung over the house, which only a few hours before had resounded to mirth and gaiety.

A step away from the room where men talked in muted tones, Jack sat with his mother and brother. His arm encircled Mrs. Wentworth comfortably. His other arm reached out until his hand touched the shoulder of his stepbrother lightly, compassionately.

Jack's face was drawn with suffering. He wanted to believe, as his stepmother said, that his father had died from a heart attack. But there was the position of the body on the rug, head up, with an open wound on his head. If his father had fallen and struck the andirons, he would have been lying face downward. Unless someone had moved him.

And if someone had been with his father, who was that person? The inspector had learned that the heavy paperweight his father had used was missing. Why?

"Mr. Wentworth," Inspector Waldrop was standing in the door. "We've reached our conclusions," the inspector said. "We agree with Dr. Lockwood that your father died of heart failure as a result of shock." Jack felt his mother stiffen against him and Barry's shoulder relax a little under his hand.

"But, we believe," the inspector continued, "that shock was the result of being struck suddenly by some heavy object—"

HE broke off, his eyes sweeping the trio. "It will be necessary to question the staff of servants, and talk with members of the family also. You are the only members of the family?"

"We three and my sister," "I should like to talk with your sister," Inspector Waldrop said. "Routine. But necessary. You understand?"

"Miss Dexter, please awaken my sister," Jack spoke briefly.

He became aware that Miss Dexter's usually expressionless countenance was working with emotion, and that her eyes were fixed on his strangely. He seemed to read in her queer gaze a struggle to communicate something.

When she made no move to leave, Jack began again: "Miss Dexter—" And then as something clicked in his brain, "wait, I'll go for Jill. I believe it would be best for me to break it to her."

"Do you mean the girl doesn't know her own father?" Inspector Waldrop stopped in sheer astonishment.

"We thought it was kinder to wait," Jack answered sternly. As he walked away, Miss Dexter got to her feet and pattered after him. Jack whirled. "Then you were trying to tell me something."

"Oh yes, Mr. Jack. You see, Miss Jill isn't in her room."

"Yes. Everything is in a whirl. She's gone."

He went back to the sunroom. "The secretary has just informed me that my sister went out early. Probably to some breakfast or other."

He realized his words were falling strangely, uncertainly. He saw amazement in his mother's eyes, a queer glint in Barry's and stark unbelief in Inspector Waldrop's.

JILL absent! What could it mean? Why had she gone? Why of all mornings in the world should Jill have left the house when any unusual act would be regarded with suspicion? And this was not merely unusual. It was something so bewildering that even he—Jill's brother—could find no explanation for it. Though, of course, there was one.

He felt Inspector Waldrop's eyes on him. "Where's the telephone?" the inspector asked abruptly.

Jack silently led the way from the room.

Inspector Waldrop said gravely: "I might as well be honest with you, Mr. Wentworth. I tried to spare your mother the shock. We're certain this is an inside job. Take that marble paperweight we found, by mere accident, shoved in between some magazines."

"I think you're all crazy," Jack muttered hoarsely. "What do you make out of that?"

"The man who cleans your father's study is positive that it was there yesterday morning, holding down some papers," Inspector Waldrop replied slowly. "Jack did not reply."

"I understand the servants come on about 6:30. Is that correct?"

"Generally. Sometimes later, after a party that had kept them all here very late."

"I see. We've questioned the head gardener, who apparently is deaf, dumb and blind to everything. But the second gardener, Willis, and his wife gave some information. They were both awake at six o'clock—the time Miss Dexter and Mrs. Wentworth heard the sound of a fall, and also the time Mr. Wentworth's watch stopped. It was broken by the fall. Willis and his wife say the two German police dogs wouldn't have allowed a stranger to enter the grounds without an infernal racket. Is that right?"

JACK answered slowly: "Yes, they're good watch dogs."

"Furthermore, there was someone with your father during the evening who smoked a cigarette. There are cigarette ashes on the smoking stand by a chair that is close to your father's desk. Close enough for the person in a fit of anger to have reached out and found the marble paperweight handy. Now, Mr. Montaine doesn't smoke cigarettes. Neither does your father. We've learned they were in conference together."

"I'm afraid all that is mighty flimsy evidence that dad was struck down, inspector."

"Maybe. But finally the servant who made his rounds after the ball found Mr. Wentworth alone in his study. He went about setting things in order, and he swears there were no ashes in the tray on the stand. I understand that you, your brother, and your sister do smoke cigarettes."

"Barry and I—"Jack began and hesitated.

"Your sister does not smoke?" "Jill doesn't smoke generally. I've seen her take a cigarette on occasions. Very rarely. She doesn't like them."

"But under nervous excitement—"

"We must question your sister," Waldrop resumed. "We must know the reason why she left home before it was good daylight on a cold, snowy morning without a word to a member of her family."

He turned to the telephone. Jack stood like stone while the inspector spoke professionally into the receiver: "Call all cars with instruction to pick up Jill Wentworth, who is driving a custom-built tan Pierce . . . the license number is . . ."

the big powers which control and sway it. Encouraged by the League to resist the war of aggression waged upon his country by Italy, he has lost everything save honor. All his once-proud titles today sound derisively: "King of Kings of Ethiopia"—with himself in exile and all the Ethiopian chiefs, who acknowledged his rule, either killed by the Italians or forced by them into submission! Conquering Lion of Judah—with his armies wiped out, his capital and country in the hands of the enemy!

Today he lives far from his native land, in the old watering place of Bath, simply, modestly as befits one bereft of fortune. At the time he left his country, much was made in the reports concerning the vast treasure he was supposed to have carried off with him. What it really amounted to was a few boxes of silver coins and a box or two of silver plate—his own possessions. They have long ago been spent to maintain his family, to send his representatives to Geneva to the League of Nations Assembly, and in fees for lawyers looking after his interests.

Financial Frustration
In the desperate attempt to help himself, the poor little Emperor has been killed at every turn. He sat down to write his memoirs. There was a London publisher willing to issue the book. There was in England and elsewhere a sympathetic audience ready to buy it. But when he had completed it, he was doomed to disappointment. The manuscript was sent back to him. Inexpensive in the art of book-making, Haile Selassie had spent too much time narrating far distant events and had given all too little space to the tragic war with Italy—the inside story, as only he could reveal it.

Then he turned to the French courts to establish his rights to big blocks of stock in the French-controlled Addis Ababa-Djibouti railway, the only line leading from the Red Sea to the capital of Ethiopia. In the same courts he sought to establish his rights to stock in the Franco-Abyssinian Salt Co. Had he been successful, he could have sold these shares and gotten much-needed financial relief. The French courts are still pondering.

$50,000 Tied Up in Court
Next he turned to the English courts and filed suit against the Cable and Wireless Co. for $50,000 he claimed was due him under an agreement regarding wireless service between Addis Ababa and England. The company did not deny that the money was due to somebody, but questioned whether Haile Selassie was that somebody. This was especially so because Italy claimed the money.

play of the fact that he was still recognized as Emperor of Ethiopia by the British government. The wireless people said the trouble was that as the King of Italy now claimed to be the Emperor of Ethiopia, he might sue the company for the money, claiming Haile Selassie had no right to it. The English court is lumbering over the point.

So straitened have the circumstances of Haile Selassie now become, that, as soon as they think the movement of Great Britain is going to issue an appeal for a relief fund for him. This association has among its directors a number of prominent members of Parliament.

Live, Love, Learn Saenger Tuesday

New Film Stars Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell

Mirthful entertainment with triple-powered value indicated in its title comes Tuesday to the Saenger in the picture, "Live, Love and Learn." Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell, both favorites of the screen, have the co-starring roles. Montgomery as a guy devil-may-care artist of Greenwich Village. Miss Russell as a daughter of society.

Through her love for him she gives up the 400-more-or-less of her set and goes to live in a garret with a north light, near a delicatessen and a Chinese laundry in the throbbing heart of the village. Here, adventure overtakes them and for a while shatters their romance.

But true love and heroic measures combine to restore them to one another's arms and the lofty studio room. Montgomery goes back to his usual and rebuilds the career that almost slipped when they parted. The story is amusing and has its moments of drama, but it is largely intended for laughter and unquestionably gains its point at every move.

Robert Benchley, humorist and more recently actor, plays an excellent part. Others who stand out in the cast include Helen Vinson, Mickey Rooney, Mervyn Woolley, E. E. Clive and Charles Judels.

Hot Temper Wins Wife

William Gargan and Judith Barrett, the featured leads in Universal's "Behind the Mike"

Hot tempers very often get people into trouble and out of jobs. Seldom does a hot temper get a man a wife and restore him to anybody's good graces. However, in the case of the radio program producer portrayed by William Gargan in Universal's "Behind the Mike," the film coming to the New Theater on Tuesday and Wednesday a low boiling point for his emotional outbursts brings the broadcasting director an attractive bride and carries him back to heights he once had lost.

In this comedy drama, "Behind the Mike," William Gargan starts out by offending the most influential sponsor of a big time New York radio broadcasting director an attractive bride and equals one lost job, which should make him even. But it places him "behind the 8 ball," and in a small-town radio station that is ready to close.

Gargan calls on Don Wilson to help him put over the forlorn hope. Don, known to the radio public for his work on Jack Benny's program, is right at home in his role as an announcer. Gargan proceeds to lose his temper again when Judith Barrett of the rival station joshes him about his "2 watt" station. She says, "It's 2 watts—what for? and what next?"

Stirred to anger, Gargan goes after the other station, discovers that its owner and crooked mayor are planning to cheat the city, and blasts their plan by broadcasting the details. The resulting furor attracts the attention of the radio company that had previously fired Gargan. The influential sponsor, with whom he had battled, says, "I want that fellow on my program, whoever he is. Go get him for me. He'll boost my Crumchee Munchie sales by millions."

So Gargan goes back to the big time station. Romance develops in the clinches and he takes Judith Barrett with him. The supporting cast includes such well known comedians as Sterling Holloway, Roy Atwell, Gerald Oliver Smith and Spencer Charters.

Four newcomers, the "Washboard Hot Peppers," aged 6 to 12, add their funmaking and never-before-heard music to the screen offering. Sidney Salkow directed "Behind the Mike" from the screen play by Barry Trivers. The associate producer is Lou Brock. The movie features the song, "Once You're in Love," by Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson.

When day is hushed and hidden And golden words are mute, The elegist of evening Touches his silver lute. As if the light were lyric That from the first star gleams, Far through the dewy pinewoods The glimmering choral streams; As if through lonely oases Of sundown's gorgeous fame, Resplendent dying beauty sang Anthems of love and pain; As if the rose-hay's beauty In music overflowed, Till all the fading forest hears Her radiant vespers hymned; As if a heart long harried And scourged by many a rod, Had triumphed and were singing Safe in the arms of God. —Selected.

Another book that will be of great interest to the local people especially is George Ware's "Southern Crows and Vegetables." In the fiction list we note "Woman in Love" by Kathleen Norris, "Wife vs. Secretary," by Faith Baldwin. And the following books for children: "Real Tales of Real Dogs" by Torburn, "Roller Skates" by Ruth Sawyer, "Circus Boy" by Bunn, "Elephant Twins" by I. Sothorn and Haley at Rialto Sunday

"Danger Love at Work" Is an Outstanding Comedy Film

New ways of loving and newer ways of laughing in the new kind of laugh hit that is the funniest "com-mo-tion-picture" of the year will bring a liberal education in hilarity to the screen of the Rialto Theater when "Danger-Love At Work" opens Sunday. Ann Sothorn, Jack Haley, Mary Boland and Edward Everett Horton are starred in the daffiest comedy ever produced. "In or out of bedlam, no one has ever 16 hours to sleep."

seen the likes of the frantic romances and haywire hilarity of this outstanding comedy. In a nutshell (a very fitting place, by the way) this new kind of rib-tickling tale is a simple story (simply devastating) of Girls meets Boy, Boy meets Family, Boy loses Mind! The Girl is Ann Sothorn, the daffiest debutante who ever came out of a trance! The Boy is Jack Haley, the most bewildered Romeo who ever faced a shotgun! The Family is altogether pixilated, with a cuckoo for their crest and a straitjacket their coat-of-arms! The Mind—well, nobody does, it's all grand fun!
